

OUR HISTORY

Woman-owned and led for more than 30 years, Detroit-based Nemeth Bonnette Brouwer exclusively represents management in the prevention, resolution and litigation of labor and employment disputes.

Since its founding by Patricia Nemeth in 1992, Nemeth Bonnette Brouwer has been a Detroit-based woman-owned and led law firm dedicated to working with employers to prevent, resolve, and litigate employment disputes. More than 30 years later, the partners, associates, and support staff at Nemeth Bonnette Brouwer continue to serve a diverse client base in the niche areas of employment litigation, traditional labor law, and management consultation.

The firm attributes its success at providing the highest quality legal services to the pursuit of a single common goal – putting the client first. One of the many important ways Nemeth Bonnette Brouwer keeps the client first is its “firm client” approach. Rather than seeing its clients as “belonging” to individual attorneys competing with each other for work, Nemeth Bonnette Brouwer values collaboration over competition, creating an internal synergy among its attorneys and support staff not typically seen in corporate law firms with disparate practices in multiple locations. Our attorneys and support staff work together to sustain a hardworking team that listens, anticipates client needs, and exceeds their expectations.

Persistence and responsiveness in serving its clients for over 30 years has enabled Nemeth Bonnette Brouwer to grow into a regionally, nationally, and internationally recognized firm, sought after by employers of all sizes. At its heart, though, Nemeth Bonnette Brouwer remains a Detroit-based, independent boutique firm that is privileged to maintain and honored to serve an impressive client roster in a wide range of industries. Its attorneys are proud to serve not just as trusted legal advisers, but as business and community leaders.
